Subject: Witness statement

Hi Tracey. I wanted a chance to try to better explain more, if you could add this to my witness statement or forward this email on to whomever it concerns please.

When I received the Facebook message from [redacted] I responded after I realized who it was. My first thought and reaction was to ask about the funeral because I knew he went home since his biological father had passed away. The night before he left for his home visit he told me this and asked me to pray for him. Hence these are my first messages to him. I let my concern over rule my judgement of just not speaking with him at all. However once I knew he would see that I had read the messages and not responded I felt more compelled to ask about the funeral instead of thinking about not communicating to him at all. After conversing I started to think about the very fact that we were communicating and became paranoid which is why I asked him not to say anything. My bigger concern was that none of the other dorm mates would know or try to communicate with me. Second I did think how would I be able to explain this to management but I had already crossed that line of talking to him at all that I continued. When the conversation seemed to go left based on [redacted] remarks I was thrown off guard and should have stopped altogether but I decided to go a different route for the sake of not making things awkward. Of course I did not have any intentions of crossing any lines with [redacted] and tried to decline or deflect (for lack of better words) advances made by him. There are other things from the conversation that I would like to further explain other parts of the conversation and I'm sure I'll be afforded the opportunity once contacted by corporate as some things can be unclear or misconstrued through messaging. This is not an attempt to say what I did was not wrong and I should have used better judgement and been better prepared to deal with this situation. I was wrong absolutely. My only point is that I am ready to explain the entire conversation piece by piece in hopes to shed some light on my meaning or intention behind things. I also want to make it clear and hopefully this will be found as well, that I had no intention nor was I expecting for any message to be wrong in any way or cause any harm or display unprofessionalism. For this situation I truly apologize and if I am ever afforded another chance I will take this as a learning opportunity and be very careful about not getting too comfortable in the future.

I do sometimes have a hard time letting go of youth after working with them because I always want to know how they are doing. But in previous employment as a case manager (which I did for 5 years) I always had a work phone where my old youth could call and update me on their progress. And this was not looked down on. Many youth would come to our office to visit and update us on their life. At Eckerd it is a different situation where I must let go and let them move on without us. Although I find this challenging it is not impossible and for the sake of my employability of course I would do it.

When we first start training we are bombarded with all these policies and trainings. It's a lot of information at once. So I can't say that I specifically remember what the exact protocol is for a youth requesting you as a friend on Facebook or messaging you. However I thought about it and at least became concerned because was on a home visit and not home and out of the program. It's made clear to me that I am to report any friend requests to management and have no outside contact unless they contact the program itself to speak to staff here.

I'm sorry for the long email just wanted to explain some things and of course I will further explain when I'm contacted. Thank you for your time in reading. I do not want my integrity to ever be questioned again, I do take that seriously and I highly regret not thinking this through more.

Sincerely,
Chantelle Smith
